las Bluff Man Uncovers Surial Place of a Pre-Historic Race. Many Relics Found.

Skeletons of what are presumed to have been sun worshippers, who in-habited this country long before the Christian Era, were uncovered recently by M. J. Sparkman one mile north of Poplar Bluff. Arrow heads and a skull were found near the surface several days ago, and when they were brought to town curiosity led Sparkman to investigate further to see what race had placed the arrow heads there. They are different from those used by the Indians and the skull was small, with very large jaws and teeth, which led local scientists to believe they belonged to a race that Hved in these regions many years before the Indians.

Later many more skeletons were uncovered and brought to town. Some of them are well preserved, while Street car and train service were others could not be taken from the crippled, telephone service was badly earth. Apparently the place where fered with and many houses were they were found was used as a burial

The skeletons all faced the east and near the head traces of burned charcoal could be found. It was the custom of the sun worshippers to make a burnt offering to their dead and 'to place the body facing the east. The skull is small, indicating that the peocific trains, due there from St. Louis ple once inhabiting this territory were and Kansas City at 7 o'clock, had not of a low intelligence and possessed of arrived at 10 o'clock; the tracks of the massive jaws with which to tear the flesh from the wild beasts they ate. Bird Cages the Newport Fad. The appearance at Newport of young women carrying small wicker bird cages is getting to be a daily occurrence. The desire to do something "different" has perhaps as much as anything else to do with the promotion of the latest fad, but whatever the basis may be, the public appearance of Miss Society and her favorite song bird is getting to be almost a part of the daily routine. So, if you happen to see a tastefully gowned young woman strolling along with a bird cage dangling from the fingers of her right hand-which is the proper way to carry the cagedon't go away with the idea that the family is moving and they won't trust the songster to the man on the van. or that she contemplates a long journey and has no one at home to feed the pet.
